More than 160 people have died in two shipwrecks in the last week while trying to cross the Mediterranean by boat from Libya. The IOM spokesperson, Safa Msehli, explained that at least 102 people died instantly last Friday after the boat they were traveling sank and that some of them were rescued and returned to the Libyan coast.

The second shipwreck took place on Saturday and, according to the Libyan coast guard, the death toll was 62.
